

Exploring Climate Literacy with Monsters, Inc.:

A Systems Thinking Approach

Marek Oziewicz

In this interactive lecture Marek Oziewicz will introduce a systems thinking approach to climate literacy discussions. The participants will be invited to consider the notion of the cultural work of stories and engage in narrative exploration activities based on Monsters, Inc. and two short clips shown during the lecture.

Marek Oziewicz is Sidney and Marguerite Henry Professor of Children's and Young Adult Literature at the University of Minnesota-Twin Cities and serves as Director of the Center for Climate Literacy. He studies the Anthropocene as a challenge to our story systems and coordinates international efforts to design structures for universal climate literacy education.
